

Mike Fey

Co-Founder and CEO
Island Technology

Michael Fey leads Island as co-founder and CEO, relying on his extensive experience in cyber security, enterprise software and cloud technology.

Fey served as president and chief operating officer at Symantec and prior to joining Symantec, he served as president and chief operating officer of Blue Coat, leading all product and go-to-market functions at both organizations. While at Blue Coat, Fey led the company to aggressive growth, resulting in its acquisition by Symantec for $4.7 billion in 2016. Prior to that, Fey was executive vice president and general manager for enterprise products at McAfee and chief technology officer of Intel Security playing a pivotal role in Intel's acquisition of McAfee for $7.7 billion in 2010. While at both Intel Security and McAfee, he drove the company's long-term strategic technology vision and innovation in the enterprise network, endpoint and analytics security segments by focusing on high-growth market opportunities and exceptional field execution.

Fey holds a degree in Engineering Physics and Mathematics from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University and was co-author of Security Battleground: An Executive Field Manual, providing a playbook for security obligated executives coping with the new realities of cyber security responsibilities to the board.
