LH Capital & Lyda Hill Philanthropies – Advancing Life Sciences and Venture Innovation

Nicole G. Small is the CEO of LH Capital and Lyda Hill Philanthropies, where she oversees a diversified investment portfolio including venture investments focused on innovation in life sciences and biotech. LH Capital plays a central role in building the life sciences ecosystem in North Texas, through its investments in workforce, companies and Pegasus Park.

Previously, Nicole served as the founding CEO of the Perot Museum of Nature and Science and, earlier in her career, was CEO of an internet start-up, served as an Entrepreneur in Residence at an incubator, and worked at McKinsey & Company.

Nicole holds a B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania and an MBA from Northwestern's Kellogg School of Management. She serves on several boards, including Southwestern Medical Foundation, UTSW Presidents Advisory Board, Texas 2036, and the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History, and is a member of YPO, IWF, Charter 100, and The Dallas Assembly. She is a former board member of the AH Belo corporation.
